

ADDED STARTER WINS

Stake Feature for Maidens Goes to Bon Homme.

BELMONT PARK CROWD SMALL

Nineteen starters in first race for Platers—Fifteen to one shot leads. Practically all the way and wins by three lengths—Personal takes the fourth event in a drive.

New York, May 14.—There was a big falling off in the attendance at Belmont Park to-day, as was expected after the great crowd on Wednesday, but at that 14,000 persons enjoyed the sport. The stake event feature was the maiden for two-year-olds, five furlongs, straightaway, which was the medium for a killing with Bon Homme, a speedy colt by Oddfellow—Belle of St. Louis.

Forsythe scratched High Private and added Bon Homme. He was ridden by Shreve, and was backed from 10 to 5 to 4. Once away from the post, Bon Homme made all the running, but at the end he was pretty well extended to win by half a length from Statesman. The race was run over a slow track.

August Belmont's Priscilla ran a bang-up race in the handicap at a mile and a sixteenth. Dugan took the track with him at the start, and made a run-away of it all the way to the wire, where he had a margin of three lengths. Berkeley took the place.

Zienap was successful in the handicap for mares and fillies. Beckon, a red-hot favorite, showed the way to the middle of the turn, where she ran out, finishing last.

There were nineteen starters in the first race, for platers. Tenancy by Courtesy, a 15-to-1 shot, led practically all the way and won galloping by three lengths. Puntoon, backed from 20 to 20, closed in the last furlong and nailed the place.

Personal came away under a drive in the last furlong and won the fourth race by a length and a half. Lucille R. was second.

BAD OUTLOOK FOR HARVARD.

Yale Coming Along Strongly for the Dual Games.

Boston, May 13.—The Yale-Harvard dual meet, an affair of importance this week, is not likely after all to be such an easy thing for Harvard as some persons have been figuring. The idea was that Harvard had so many good men for the dual meet that the victory might go to the Crimson. However, the fact seems to be that the Crimson is so deficient in first-class material as to make it nearly impossible to help out very much with the second string men. The meet will decide the possession of the dual meet cup, for which the colleges are tied.

The Yale track team was greatly underrated in considering it for the meet with Princeton. Although Stevens, Butler, and Burch were unable to sprint, another man, Carey, turned out a nice performance and won from Connors and Gamble. The last named was a distinct disappointment. The best man developed in the Harvard-Dartmouth meet was G. F. Gardner, Jr., of Harvard, the intercollegiate lawn tennis champion. He won the low hurdles in 25 2-5 seconds, leading Rand, of Harvard, and Shaw, of Dartmouth, in that order. Shaw won the high hurdles in 15 1-3 seconds, against the wind, but knocked over two hurdles, the first and second.

The Crimson sprinters were not equal to the task of beating Sherman, of Dartmouth, and should hardly be able to beat Carey, of Yale, if they go no better than they did Saturday last. La Montagne appears to be a better quarter-mile than De Selding. In the half mile Harvard should have an advantage with Whittier against Kijarsoff. The distance run ought to find Yale as well off as Harvard. The hurdles look to be about an even break. Harvard ought to have an advantage in the broad jump and shot-put, but the pole vault and hammer throw should be overwhelming for Yale. The high jump ought to be in favor of Yale.

The results of the Harvard-Dartmouth and Yale-Princeton meets seem to augur that Harvard will get a beating. Incidentally, these meets have a closer line on the dangerous men for the intercollegiate. Sherman, of Dartmouth, in the sprints and broad jump, and Palmer, of Dartmouth, in the high jump, will help out Shaw in making several points for the Green in the big meet.
